II. Community Media Capacity Building Workshop (working title)

Date: 17-19 February 2010

Location: United Theological College, 63, Millers Road, Benson Town, Bangalore - 560046, INDIA. Telephone: 0091-80-23333438/23330502, Fax: 0091-80-3330015, Email: unitedtcb@gmail.com, web: <http://www.utcbangalore.in/>

Participants: Community radio trainers-facilitators; Community health/development specialists

Overview: The Commonwealth of Learning (COL) and AMARC will run a workshop for community radio and health education and development organizations as part of the AMARC

Asia Pacific Regional Conference. The workshop is part of the COL's program to develop community-based open and distance learning (ODL) programming in Asia-Pacific.

Aim of workshop: To introduce and use innovative program development and content creation approaches in order to support the wider creation of collaborative non-formal learning programs about healthy communities using community radio and other media and ICTs.

Main objectives:

1. Review relevant approaches to community-based non-formal educational programming and identify success factors
2. Introduce and use collaborative program design and participatory content development methods
3. Develop plans for new community learning programs in Asia Pacific to be implemented in the subsequent 18 months

Format of workshop:

The workshop takes a "let the trainers train themselves" approach; in other words, we will work together to develop ideas, skills and tools that will be used in follow-up. Participants will work primarily in small groups, clustered on the basis of countries and regions. Working groups will bring together media and community development representatives to collaboratively design sample learning programs and create sample radio and learning content. In other words, we'll learn the methodologies by using them. The workshop will use engaging, participatory formats and focus on practical exercises that mirror actual program development processes. The main body of the workshop will run over 2.5 days in advance of the AMARC Asia-Pacific Conference, during which there will be a playback-feedback session.

Participants:

- Representatives of radio stations, media support centers (e.g. program coordinators, trainers, etc.) and health and community development organizations that are in a position to facilitate the development of new collaborative community-based learning programs
